

ELLA LEE.
A SON OF THE SOUTHERN LAND.
By Ella Lee.
Lay her where the willow droopeth
To the dark magnoliae;
Where the breeze low music breatheth
From the bosom of the sea;
With a sorrowful devotion,
Lay her where sweet violets bloom—
Where the leaves keep gentle motion
To the sighing of the breeze.
There, there lay her,
There, there leave her,
Our fair Ella,
Our young Ella,
Ella Lee.
Ever blooming as the summer,
Ever humming like the bee,
We believed her some bright comet
From the land where souls are free.
Oh, she was so sweet and holy,
Mortal we could never be;
And she told us heavenly story,
As she sat in the meadow;
Yes, we have lost her,
Ever lost her,
Our sweet Ella,
Our fair Ella,
Our young Ella,
Ella Lee.
Lay her where the long grass sweepeth,
On the bank of many a tree—
Where the willow weeps and sigheth,
Like a sorrowful melody.
We were lovely, she was gentle,
As all angels spirits be;
Folded in a linen mantle,
Smiling near the shining sea.
We have lost her,
Sally left her,
Our fair Ella,
Our young Ella,
Ella Lee.

The following unique sketch from H. W. Beecher's "Lectures to young men" may be read with profit, we think by many:
"In town of lazy men I should expect to find crazy houses, shingles and weather boards knocked off; doors hingeless, and all a-creek; windows stuffed with rags and pillows. Instead of flowers in summer and walks in winter every side of the house would swarm with vermin in hot weather; with starving pigs in cold; fences would be curiously of lazy contrivance, and gates hung with ropes or lying flat in the mud. Lark cattle would follow every loaded wagon, supplanting a horse, with a famine in their looks. Children would be ragged dirty, scarce the school deserts; the fall fair, the church silent; the grog-shops noisy and the carpenter, blacksmith, and saddler would do the principal but of their work at the grog-shop. Lawyers would hunt criminals; butly justices, (as their interests might dictate) a compromise or make a commitment. The peace officers would drink at taverns; arrest rioters in fun, and drink with them in good earnest. Good men would be obliged to keep dark, bad men would swear, fight, and rule the town. Public days would be scenes of confusion and end in rows; elections would be drunken, illegal, boisterous and brutal."

Col. Davis.
A silly attempt has been made by the whig opposers of Col. Davis to estrange Democrats from him, on the ground of lukewarm support of Gen. Cass in 1848.—The same men then praised him during that canvass, because in advocating the claims of the Democratic candidate, he would not indulge in a abuse of Gen. Taylor, his compatriot in arms. We would think of all men these whigs demagogues, whose party would have been benefited by the alleged course of Col. Davis, have the least right to complain.

But is there the semblance of truth in what they are now saying for the base purpose we have mentioned? This question is answered by the following address, abounding in eloquent and patriotic sentiments, delivered by Col. Davis to Gen. Taylor, on the 27th February, 1848, as Chairman of the joint committee appointed by the two Houses of Congress, to communicate to him official information of his election to the Presidency.

Sir:—We have been deputed by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States officially to inform you that they have in manner provided in the Constitution, ascertained that you have been legally and constitutionally elected to fill the office of President of the United States for four years, to commence with the fourth of March, 1849; and to present to you your certificate of election, as proclaimed by the Vice President of the United States on the second Wednesday of February of the current year.

In conveying to you this evidence of the high confidence reposed in you by the people of the United States, we tend to you our cordial good wishes and earnest hope that you may find in the Chief Magistracy the honor, the glory, the happiness which should wait upon patriotism, and flow from a nation's prosperity.

Many causes, such as difference of pursuit, of circumstance, of education, or of mental characteristic, divide now, as they have heretofore divided, the people of the United States into political parties; but it is a proud spectacle to see the conflict of opinion, after having waged with its wildest fury through the course of a canvass, subside into peace at the return of an election, and no other power ever be required to enforce the result than the power of that respect which American citizens feel for the laws and institutions under which they live.

A majority of the U. S. Senate are of the political party which most strove to defeat your election. I accord in political creed with that majority. To select me, under these circumstances, to announce to you your election to the highest office in the United States, will I trust be received as a token of their acquiescence, not reluctant admission, but respectful acquiescence, in the decision of the people. I feel, sir, that I can offer assurance that from them your administration will not encounter factions opposition; that, as far as difference of opinion will permit, they will give that sincere support which our common interest and constitutional obligations might lead you to expect.

The character of your election, the general feeling of admiration and gratitude for your long, arduous, and most brilliant military services; a life of earnest devotion to your country, your whole country, give a high hope and expectation in the public mind that in taking the Chief first held by Washington, and which is sacred to every American heart, you will be able to hush the winds and still the waves of sectional strife, to preserve the constitution with all its harmonizing compromises, to promote the permanent prosperity and further illustrate the honorable fame of our Union.

Terrible and Romantic Incident.
The Paris Droit has the following rather incredible story:
A commercial traveler, whose business frequently called him from Orleans to Paris, M. Edmond D—, was accustomed to go to the hotel where he was in the habit of staying. On Thursday evening, after supper, he invited the people of the hotel to go to his chamber to take coffee, and he promised to tell them a tale full of dramatic incident. On entering the room his guests saw on the bed, near which he seated himself, a pair of pistols. "My story," said he, "has a sad denouement, and I require the pistols to make it clearly understood." As he had always been accustomed, in telling his tales, to indulge in excessive pantomime, and to take up anything which lay handy calculated to add to the effect, no supple was felt at his having prepared pistols. He began by narrating the loves of a young girl and a young man. They had both, he said, probably fidelity. The young man, whose profession obliged him to travel, once made a long absence. While he was away, he received a legacy, and on his return, hastened to place it at her feet. But on presenting himself before her, he learned that, in compliance with the wishes of her family, she had just married a wealthy merchant. The young man thereupon took a terrible resolution. "He purchased a pair of pistols like these," he continued, taking one in each hand, "then he invited his friends in his chamber, and after some conversation placed one under his chin, in this way I do, saying in a joke, that it would be a pleasure to blow out his brains. And at the same moment he pulled the trigger." Here the man discharged the pistol, and his head was shattered to pieces. "Pieces of the bone and portions of the brains fell on the floor," he continued, "the unfortunate man told his own story."

The Present Cotton Crop.
T. J. Stewart's New York Circular says, "An esteemed correspondent at Mobile, from whose letters I have formerly freely extracted, after consuming me for my ideas about the yield as expressed in my circular per Atlantic on 13th ult., adds:

"You will remember that last fall I was one of the few, comparatively large crop men, and if you will turn to the files of my letters in September, October, and November, you will see that my views, so different from yours at that period, came out very nearly right in the finale. Now, as to this crop, you may set it down as a pretty certain thing, that no matter what may be the character of the season from now until the 1st of January, we cannot reach a crop of 2,500,000 bales, and there is every probability that we shall not do better than last year, and perhaps it may turn out 2,200,000. It is useless to go over all the grounds that induced me to come to these conclusions, but as one of the veritable body of cotton crop soothsayers, I desire you to place on record my predictions."

John I. Guion.
This giant in the State Rights cause is a candidate for Chancellor. He is one of the few Greybeards who were born in the State of Mississippi, long have they honored him and many are they who love him. As a senator in the minority he was chosen President of the State Senate in 1850; as a lawyer, he was the associate and partner and friend of the great Prentiss, the Drummond light of Mississippi—as a gentleman, scholar, and statesman, few equal, none surpass him.

His interests are identified with our State, a native, and "to the manner born" we have every assurance, that wherever he may be placed, he will do his duty; we have the highest pledge made to us by him that man can make, a long life devoted to the people of Mississippi, and the character of a man who has ever been too proud, too brave, and too honest, to suffer a stain on his reputation. Then rally to him, for you have every high assurance that in him you will have an effective, vigilant and honest officer.—Panola Express.

A Cure for Warts.
Take a leaf of a plant called the house-leek, which is quite common about households, peel it and bind it upon a wart when you go to bed. In the morning the wart will be softened to such an extent that you may pull it off. Repeat the application for two or three nights, and the excrescence will disappear, leaving no mark behind. We have tried this frequently since we were boys, and know it to be an unfailing remedy.

Bots in Horses.
All know, perhaps, that this disease is caused by worms in the stomach. When the worms begin to eat the stomach, it causes great distress, and the animal will lie down and roll in agony, and if relief is not obtained, the worms cut through in a short time, and the horse inevitably dies.

A few days since a fine horse was lying in our streets, the owner exceedingly frightened, not knowing what to do. One of our neighbors saw the animal and his distress, and that of his master, and promptly ordered a pailful of salt water and a quantity of dried salt. He poured the water upon the small of his back, and put the salt in his mouth and in a few moments the horse was perfectly restored. As soon as he swallowed the salt, the worms ceased eating, and thus the life of a noble animal was saved, which but for this simple remedy, must have died.—Ohio Cultivator.

REV. L. WILSON DAVIS, A.M.,
Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy in Languages and English Literature.
(TAUGHT BY SUCH ASSISTANTS AS THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES MAY DEEM FIT.)
The Trustees of this Institution have, in accordance with the plan adopted by the Rev. C. COLTON, D.D., Principal and Instructor, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of H. W. WATKINS, Esq., the Trustees have appointed the Rev. C. COLTON, D.D., to fill the vacancy, and to open the Institution on the First of October. Professor DAVIS, who has discharged the duties of the Institution, has been appointed to fill the vacancy, and to open the Institution on the First of October. The Trustees have also appointed the Rev. C. COLTON, D.D., to fill the vacancy, and to open the Institution on the First of October. The Trustees have also appointed the Rev. C. COLTON, D.D., to fill the vacancy, and to open the Institution on the First of October.

May be had by Referees, of Mississippi, of Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, and Kentucky, of Ohio, and to Professor BARNES, of the University of Mississippi, the Board, having from the trustees of the Institution, a large number of the members of the Legislature, and others, and was intended to set forth the views of the State Rights party in a temperate and moderate manner. That address sets forth the doctrine of the Rights of the States, but does not recommend, in the first instance, the exercise of any of these rights, except the call to a Convention to ask for redress from Congress. If that redress should be refused, then it is recommended that the States should call a Convention to consider of the grievances of the South, and of the mode and measure of redress. The plan of action of either Convention to be held before the people, for their adoption or rejection, and of course, to be without effect until ratified. Nothing was recommended, but reason and argument, and no oppression should reach a point, when, according to both parties, in this State, the States provide for their safety. The point at which the oppression should be deemed intolerable, was the great matter of difference between them.

The people have decided against the first step which was proposed—Convention of the State. These all action ceases—it is an end of the matter. The peculiar institution of the South requires repose for its security. I acquiesce in the decision, and hope the country will be restored to quiet and harmony. But these matters have no connection with the office to which I aspire. In no possible manner, can a question arise out of them which can come before the High Court of the State. I have only alluded to them because, although in my station the question is entirely settled by the late election, they are still made to mingle in the canvass.

My pretensions are founded, alone, upon my qualifications for the station. I refer to my services in the office for the past nine years as the evidence of those qualifications, and I invite the strictest scrutiny into my judicial conduct. By that I am more than willing to stand or fall. In times past, you have made the judicial decisions for above party considerations—there is no reason for a departure from this honored principle on the present occasion. I am still a candidate before you for a seat on the bench of the High Court, and shall remain as until the election. Should you again honor me with your confidence by a renewal of the trust, I will endeavor, to the best of my ability, by a faithful discharge of duty.

With profound gratitude for your past kindness, I remain,
Your obedient servant,
ALEX. M. CLAYTON.
